

Paramount's
KINGS DOMINION

KD in Cyberspace

Have you ever wondered what that “Hair Bear Bunch” pin you won at Kings Dominion in 1979 is worth? Or where you could find a replacement for the “Mason-Dixon Music Hall” souvenir spoon you lost during your last move? How about finding fellow coaster enthusiasts to swap Anaconda stories with around the globe? Your answer is just a click away! The internet offers a host of Kings Dominion enhancement opportunities, ranging from places to buy and sell memorabilia to fan sites for lovers of thrill-rides.

Souvenir traders can find a variety of online merchants to help shop and swap KD wares. Recent EBay auctions include a set of “Lion Country Safari” View-Master reels ($10), a Candy Apple Grove postcard folder ($5.52) and an autographed T-shirt from the recent “Daytime Stars of CBS” weekend ($10.) Yahoo Shopping currently lists a vintage porcelain plate featuring past attractions like the Blue Ridge Tollway and Wacky Racers, while antiques specialist www.tias.com offers an ‘80’s era Kings Dominion toothpick holder available for sale. Whether you’re looking to buy or sell, the web is a great place to learn about the value and availability of park memorabilia.

Cybersites devoted to thrill rides like the Italian Job, Hypersonic and Shockwave are equally abundant.

American Coaster Enthusiasts, the world’s largest coaster-lovers club, offers newsletters, user guides and even a roller coaster calendar on its official site www.aceonline.org. And the interactive Coasterfanatics.com allows visitors to share photos and stories, rate their park experiences and participate in polls and discussion boards. It even has a chart listing the average line ‘wait times’ for KD’s roller coasters. For the truly hardcore fan, Coasterzombies.com provides members’ only events devoted to experiencing the ultimate thrill ride, like the club’s “Volcanomania” celebration this past spring at King’s Dominion.

The list of internet offerings for KD lovers goes on! So before you hit the road for your next trip to the park, hit the information superhighway first. You’ll be amazed at what you find!

Miriam Van Scott
miriamvs@aol.com

